About Me

I'm Francesco, an M.Sc. graduate in Computer Science and Engineering – Artificial Intelligence from Politecnico di Milano, with a strong background in deep learning, generative models, and large language models. Naturally curious and driven by a constant thirst for knowledge, I enjoy tackling challenging problems and see every obstacle as an opportunity to learn and grow. Tenacious, resilient, and collaborative, I am always eager to step outside my comfort zone.
Primarily interested in Artificial Intelligence, with a strong focus on Deep Learning and Generative AI, I enjoy designing and implementing intelligent systems capable of solving complex problems across different domains. My experience includes the development of machine learning pipelines, deep neural network architectures, and AI-driven applications ranging from conversational agents to data analysis and predictive modeling. I have worked with several modern AI paradigms, including Large Language Models (LLMs), deep neural networks for supervised and unsupervised learning, and Reinforcement Learning systems for sequential decision-making. In my Master's thesis, I focused on the orchestration of LLMs, designing systems in which multiple models and tools are coordinated to decompose, route, and solve complex tasks more effectively than a single model.
